March 2021

Hello young environmental enthusiasts,

The Nith Valley EcoBoosters (NVEB) are presenting a family focused webinar, Let's Talk Plastics, on Earth Day, Thursday April 22, 2021 from 6:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.

We will be showing the film "Kids can save the planet: Plastic is forever" produced by 13-year-old Dylan D'Haeze, the inspiration for the event. There will be presentations by Deanna Dakin of the Region of Waterloo's Waste Management Division, and Chase Oudshoorn, a local youth climate advocate, followed by a Question & Answer period.

The webinar will also include a series of short pre-recorded video or audio clips produced by young people, and this is why we are reaching out to you. If you are interested, we'll send you a link to "Plastic is forever", and after watching the film, we hope you will want to participate by creating your own video or audio message. Does the film inspire you? Is there a problem with plastics not presented that you want to talk about? Maybe this makes you want to "rant"?

Here are some details:

- Maximum 2 minutes long, but as short as you want.
- You don't have to star in this video or audio. Feel free to collaborate. Be creative!
- Some videos and audios will be featured during the webinar; more will be displayed on the NVEB YouTube channel and website.
- All students grade 12 and under are welcome to participate.

If you would like to participate, contact us by March 22nd at nvecoboosters.events@gmail.com. We will send you more information including a link and password to the film and a permission/waiver form. Feel free to share this invitation with others.

Hope to hear from you soon!
